

We are excited to invite you to our upcoming fundraising event, "Regulating AI in the UK: time to think or behind the pack?", taking place on 10th September at Herbert Smith Freehills.

This panel discussion will bring together leading voices in AI and regulation to discuss the future of this burgeoning sector, explore global regulatory approaches, and examine the crucial role the UK should play in governing new technologies.

Our brilliant speaker lineup features James Wood (Partner, Herbert Smith Freehills) and the following panellists:

- Lord Tim Clement-Jones CBE – Lib Dem Lords spokesperson for Science, Innovation and Technology, Co-Chair of the All Party Parliamentary Group on Artificial Intelligence, and author of Living with the Algorithm: Servant or Master?: AI Governance and Policy for the Future (2024)
- Sophia Adams Bhatti – Public policy and human rights expert, author of "Algorithms in the Justice System: Current Practices, Legal and Ethical Challenges" in The Law of Artificial Intelligence, eds Hervey and Lavy (2024), and formerly Global Head of Purpose and Impact, Simmons & Simmons
- Brittany Smith – OpenAI's Head of UK Policy and Partnerships, experienced advocate at the intersection of AI and equity in industry, civil society, and philanthropy, and member of the Board of Directors of Partnership on AI.

Starting at 6pm (with registration commencing at 5.45pm), the Regulating AI in the UK panel discussion will be followed by a networking drinks reception at Herbert Smith Freehills (Exchange House, Primrose St, London EC2A 2EG).

Exclusive £50 early bird tickets available to buy via this link for a limited time.

This offer will end on 1st September (when tickets will go up to £75) so we encourage you to book early!

All funds will go directly to support JUSTICE's vital work, including our new workstream on AI, human rights and the law.

We hope to see you there.

Sincerely,

Stephanie
