

The 116th Annual Conference of the Society of Legal Scholars will be an in person event at the University of Leeds led by Professor Duncan Sheehan, Professor of Business Law, University of Leeds and President of the Society of Legal Scholars.

- ▶ The theme for 2025 is open, offering opportunities for creativity in subject matter and methodology.
- ▶ The aim of the conference is for a diverse and engaging range of papers, encompassing the wide spectrum of the subject of law. As legal scholars, our goal is for research and scholarship to make a meaningful impact, rather than go unnoticed.
- ▶ The 2025 conference will revisit themes from the 2023 Oxford Brookes University conference, focusing on how legal work can inform the public good, public policy, and public discourse along with building on themes from the 2024 University of Bristol conference, examining how legal research has become increasingly interdisciplinary.
- ▶ Accommodation will be available at local hotels and at the University's Storm Jameson Court, a five-minute walk away.
- ▶ Delegates will have easy access to the city centre, with plenty of restaurants and bars to explore.
- ▶ The Society's Annual Dinner will be held at the Royal Armouries in the Leeds Docks area, with the opportunity to view one of its galleries over pre-dinner drinks.

The SLS provides a positive inclusive environment for legal academics, at all stages of their career, to engage with and learn valuable lessons from each other.
